Who are Co-Treatment?

Co-Treatment was formed in 2019 by Darrell Taylor, with the support of colleague and mentor Simon Evans and local business owner Keith Cox.

We noticed that companies tend to focus on their main products offerings and more often than not these businesses are unable to investigate optimum sustainability solutions.

This is the space where Co-Treatment's knowledge around the planting of trees and carbon off-setting come into play.

We set-up Co-Treatment to provide a consultative tree-planting service to local businesses in the East Midlands.

What do we do?

Our core business is in planting trees, however that's the tip of the iceberg.

Co-Treatment own land where we are developing our own small woodland, which will absorb water to reduce the risks of flooding, provide habitat for nature, and absorb Carbon from the atmosphere long into the future.

In addition, we are re-wilding areas of our land for bees and insects to thrive, creating homes for birds and other animals, planting memorial trees and creating a beautiful environment for future generations to enjoy.

What makes us special?

We focus on improving our region, planting 100% of our trees right here in the East-Midlands, after-all if you produce emissions here then it makes sense to absorb them here too!

Co-Treatment owns several acres of land where we plant all of our trees just inside the National Forest boundary. Our growing woodland is in North West Leicestershire, in the East Midlands.

Our trees are all native to the UK and fit within our biosphere, they are guaranteed for a minimum of 20-years to honour the Carbon absorption that we commit to, and we over-plant to ensure there is always a little extra being absorbed too!

We are working with local charities, schools and organisations to share our initiative and expand the reach of the good work that we do, striving to make an impact ourselves while inspiring the next generations too.

Why do we do it?

- ▶ Because it is the right thing to do, and we care about the future
- ▶ Co-Treatment was born from a desire by all of its founders to make a positive impact to the environment, to leave a better planet behind for future generations and to engage businesses in more sustainable operating practises
- ▶ Co-Treatment is run as a not-for-profit company; no salaries; no dividends or other income is received by any of our employees
- ▶ We firmly believe that if everyone plays their part and takes a small action to live and work in a more sustainable manner, the World will be a healthier place for many generations into the future
